

Commercial Projects

Our head office and joinery works are situated on the edge of the City of London and in the heart of Thameside industries. Historic Buildings for commercial use are a recurring feature of our workload.

Our knowledge & connections within local industries enable us to compete successfully. Our experience of managing contracts on heavily congested and closely regulated sites will give potential clients confidence in the whole construction process.

In many cases the buildings are listed or of an architecturally sensitive nature often involving extensive structural alteration. We have experience and consequent ability to undertake this work in a careful and sympathetic way.

The careful selection of sub-contractors ensures we achieve the very high standard of finish required in the commercial developments shown.

Equally, we are able to demonstrate an ability to manage the highly technical work in factories where continuous operation of the manufacturing process is paramount.

Bespoke joinery is produced by our in-house joinery company, which often features as part of high quality office refurbishment contracts. As with most mixed use developments within London, commercial uses, whether it be office, retail or leisure use, often form part of our own private development workload.

Rooff can accommodate differing levels of specification, from basic shell and core structures to part or fully fitted hi-tech interiors with up to date computer technologies, and service infrastructure systems.
